Dr. Peter Yucis is the lead Physical Therapist at Integrity Rehab in Medford, NJ. Dr. Yucis is local to the community residing in Atco, NJ. Dr. Yucis has experience in treating a wide variety of patients including both simple and complex orthopedic and neuromuscular conditions.

Dr. Yucis graduated Suma Cumlada from the University of the Sciences in Philadelphia, PA where he earned a bachelor degree in Health Science and a Doctorate in Physical Therapy. While studying for his degree, he was inducted into two national honor societies and finished at the top of his class. During his time at the University of the Sciences, Dr. Yucis developed a passion for orthopedic and sports medicine and had the opportunity to complete a clinical affiliation treating numerous orthopedic and neurological diagnoses within high school, college, and professional athletes.

Dr. Yucis' desire for orthopedic and sports medicine led him to complete additional training including completion of Mackenzie, Functional Movement Assessment, Personalized Blood Flow Restriction training, Functional Dry Needling. He plans to continue his education and become an Orthopedic Certified Specialist, along with completing certifications in Manual Therapy, IASTM, and Vestibular Rehab. While attending the University of the Sciences, he had the opportunity to complete research on Patellofemoral pain syndrome, which led to a specific interest in knee rehabilitation. He is highly skilled in physical therapy and believes in individualized treatments based on research.

Dr. Yucis developed his passion for Physical Therapy when he sustained an injury playing baseball for Saint Joseph's High School in Hammonton. His love for sports not only aids in treating injuries but also leads him to develop a plan of care to help prevent future injuries. During his free time, Dr. Yucis enjoys golfing, fishing and spending time with family and friends.
